

written and edited by

Casey A. Barrio Minton
Donna M. Gibson
Carrie A. Wachter Morris

Evaluating Student Learning Outcomes in Counselor Education

AMERICAN COUNSELING
ASSOCIATION

6101 Stevenson Avenue, Suite 600
Alexandria, VA 22304
www.counseling.org

Evaluating Student Learning Outcomes in Counselor Education

Copyright © 2016 by the American Counseling Association. All rights reserved. Printed in the United States of America. Except as permitted under the United States Copyright Act of 1976, no part of this publication may be reproduced or distributed in any form or by any means, or stored in a database or retrieval system, without the written permission of the publisher.

American Counseling Association
6101 Stevenson Avenue, Suite 600
Alexandria, VA 22304

Associate Publisher • Carolyn C. Baker

Digital and Print Development Editor • Nancy Driver

Senior Production Manager • Bonny E. Gaston

Copy Editor • Tyler Krupa

Cover and text design by Bonny E. Gaston

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Names: Barrio Minton, Casey A., author. | Gibson, Donna M., author. | Wachter Morris, Carrie A., author.

Title: Evaluating student learning outcomes in counselor education / Casey A. Barrio Minton, Donna M. Gibson, Carrie A. Wachter Morris.

Description: Alexandria, VA : American Counseling Association, [2016] | Includes bibliographical references and index.

Identifiers: LCCN 2015049928 | ISBN 9781556203374 (pbk. : alk. paper)

Subjects: LCSH: Student counselors—Training of—Evaluation.

Classification: LCC LB1731.75.B37 2016 | DDC 371.4—dc23 LC record available at <http://lcn.loc.gov/2015049928>

To our fellow counselor educators, past, present, and future.
You give of yourselves to train talented professional counselors who will change the world one client at a time.
This is beyond measure!

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
About the Editors	ix
About the Contributors	xi

Part I • Context

Chapter 1	The SLO Movement	3
Chapter 2	The Bigger Picture of Program Evaluation	9
Chapter 3	Identifying Objectives and Mapping Curricula and Processes	17

Part II • Selecting Assessments and Developing Measures

Chapter 4	Course-Based Assessments	35
Chapter 5	Field Experiences	41
Chapter 6	Comprehensive Examinations	45
Chapter 7	Portfolios	57
Chapter 8	Theses and Dissertations	65
Chapter 9	Dispositions	73
Chapter 10	Indirect Measures	79
Chapter 11	Creating Measures	87

Part III • Moving Forward

Chapter 12	Collecting and Managing Data	97
Chapter 13	Analyzing Data	105
Chapter 14	Reporting Data	113
Chapter 15	Using Data to Enhance Programs	123
Chapter 16	Using Data to Support Individual Student Development	129
Chapter 17	Using Data in the SoTL	137

Part IV • Applications

Chapter 18	Professional Counseling Orientation and Ethical Practice	143
Chapter 19	Social and Cultural Diversity	151
Chapter 20	Human Growth and Development	157
Chapter 21	Career Counseling and Development	163
Chapter 22	Counseling and Helping Relationships	171
Chapter 23	Group Counseling and Group Work	181
Chapter 24	Assessment and Testing	187
Chapter 25	Research and Program Evaluation	191
Chapter 26	Addiction Counseling	197
Chapter 27	Career Counseling	209
Chapter 28	Clinical Mental Health Counseling	215
Chapter 29	Clinical Rehabilitation Counseling	223
Chapter 30	College Counseling and Student Affairs	233
Chapter 31	Marriage, Couples, and Family Counseling	239
Chapter 32	School Counseling	245
Chapter 33	Counselor Education and Supervision—Counseling	253
Chapter 34	Counselor Education and Supervision—Supervision	259
Chapter 35	Counselor Education and Supervision—Teaching	275
Chapter 36	Counselor Education and Supervision—Research	283
Chapter 37	Counselor Education and Supervision—Leadership and Advocacy	289
	References	295
	Index	309

Acknowledgments

We wish to acknowledge the following individuals and groups for making this book possible:

- The Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP), for working toward unity and high standards in the counseling profession. Unless otherwise cited, the ideas and recommendations expressed in this book are those of the authors and do not represent the opinions or policy of CACREP. Yet, our experiences as students in CACREP-accredited programs and now as scholars of the profession help us understand how to develop curricula that can meet the ever-changing needs of our students and their future clients.
- The Association for Assessment and Research in Counseling, for partnering in this work and embracing a vision that advances the counseling profession by promoting best practices in assessment, research, and evaluation in counseling.
- Paula Swindle, doctoral student, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, for her service as managing editor throughout the review process.
- Sharon Bruner, doctoral student, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, for her technical support throughout the revision process.
- Julia Taylor, doctoral student, Virginia Commonwealth University, for editing as a “future consumer” in the early writing days for this project.
- Finally, our families, for their love and support throughout not only our writing process but also our journeys as counselors and counselor educators.

About the Editors

Casey A. Barrio Minton, PhD, NCC, is an associate professor of counselor education at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, Tennessee. She served as president (2013–2014) and secretary (2010–2012) for the Association for Assessment and Research in Counseling (AARC). Casey has published more than two dozen journal articles in professional counseling venues, three books, and nearly as many chapters and works. She presents regularly at local, state, and national conferences and serves the profession through her editorship of the Journal for Counselor Leadership and Advocacy and through her presence on editorial boards, including Counselor Education and Supervision and The Professional Counselor. In all, her presentations, publications, and leadership reflect her research interests in building a strong profession through research and program evaluation, evidence-based teaching, and crisis intervention.

Donna M. Gibson, PhD, LPC, NCC, is an associate professor and program coordinator of counselor education at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Virginia. She served as president (2007–2008) and member-at-large for membership (2001–2004) for AARC and is serving currently as the AARC governing council representative of the American Counseling Association. In addition to more than 100 peer-refereed professional state, regional, national, and international presentations, Donna has more than 40 professional publications, including peer-refereed journal articles, book chapters, and books. Her presentations and publications reflect her research interests in program evaluation, professional identity development, leadership and leadership identity development, and advocacy in counseling.

Carrie A. Wachter Morris, PhD, NCC, ACS, is an associate professor of counseling and educational development at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, where she coordinates the school counseling track. She served as president (2015–2016) and secretary (2012–2014) for AARC. Carrie has published nearly two dozen articles in national peer-refereed journals, one book, and an additional 10 chapters and works. She presents regularly at state, regional, and national conferences on topics related to the scholarship of teaching and learning in counselor education, crisis, and school counselor education. She serves the profession on the editorial boards of Counselor Education and Supervision and Professional School Counseling. Carrie's engagements reflect her commitments to innovation in counselor education pedagogy, program evaluation, professional advocacy, and crisis prevention and intervention.

About the Contributors

Nick R. Abel, EdD, is an assistant professor of school counseling at Butler University in Indianapolis, Indiana. He has a special interest in school counselor preparation and teaches many related courses, including professional orientation, legal/ethical issues, and comprehensive school counseling.

L. DiAnne Borders, PhD, LPC, NCC, ACS, is Burlington Industries Excellence Professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, where she teaches the doctoral course in clinical supervision and oversees the supervision interns. She has published numerous studies on supervisor training and the supervision process. She is coauthor of The New Handbook of Clinical Supervision and the editor of The Clinical Supervisor.

Ryan G. Carlson, PhD, LMHC, NCC, is an assistant professor of counselor education at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, South Carolina. His research focuses on interventions for high-risk couples and families. Ryan teaches master's students in the marriage, couples, and family counseling track, including the introduction to family counseling and couples counseling courses.

Catherine Y. Chang, PhD, LPC, NCC, CPCS, is a professor at Georgia State University in Atlanta, Georgia, and she is a program coordinator for the Counselor Education and Practice doctoral program. Her primary areas of interest include social justice and advocacy, multicultural counseling competence, supervision, and counseling implications related to Asian American and Korean American clients.

M. Kristina DePue, PhD, NCC, is an assistant professor of counselor education at the University of Florida in Gainesville, Florida. Her clinical specialty is addictions counseling.

Melissa J. Fickling, PhD, LPC, NCC, is an assistant professor of clinical mental health counseling at the University of Memphis in Memphis, Tennessee. Her specialties include career counseling, college counseling, and adult career transitions; she is particularly interested in intersections of work and mental health.

Laura M. Gonzalez, PhD, is an assistant professor in counseling and educational development at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She has research interests in supports and barriers to college access for Latino immigrant families, and she teaches in the college counseling/career counseling and researcher development areas.

- Kristopher M. Goodrich, PhD, LMHC, NCGC-I, is an associate professor and program coordinator of the Counselor Education Program at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, New Mexico. He has specialty interests in lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, questioning, and intersex issues in counseling and addictions, and he teaches courses in substance abuse, mental health, and sexuality in counseling. He currently serves as the president of the Association for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Issues in Counseling (2015–2016) and has a part-time clinical practice at the Evolution Group—an addictions counseling agency in Albuquerque, New Mexico.
- Tyler M. Kimbel, PhD, is Vice President, Research and Advocacy & Outreach, at the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs in Alexandria, Virginia. He also serves as an adjunct professor at Palo Alto University in Palo Alto, California, where he teaches research and program evaluation, career counseling, and capstone writing. His specialty interests include school counseling, program evaluation, research, accreditation policy, counselor identity, and professional issues.
- Margaret R. Lamar, PhD, LPC, is an assistant professor at Palo Alto University in Palo Alto, California. She has specialty interests in researcher identity development, and she teaches professional orientation, ethics, and research.
- A. Stephen Lenz, PhD, LPC, is an assistant professor and chair of the Counseling Outcome Research and Program Evaluation Academy at Texas A&M University–Corpus Christi. He has been nationally recognized for his work with program evaluation and development for adolescents and young adults as well as for his contributions to the body of empirical evidence regarding trauma-focused treatments. He is president-elect of the Association for Assessment and Research in Counseling.
- C. Peeper McDonald, EdS, LPC, NCC, is a doctoral candidate in the Counselor Education and Practice program at Georgia State University in Atlanta, Georgia. She has specialty interests in professional identity, social justice, and advocacy issues as well as multicultural issues in counseling. She has experience teaching both online and in-person courses with a heavy emphasis on basic and advanced counseling skills.
- Rebecca A. Newgent, PhD, LCPC, NCC, is a professor at Western Illinois University–Quad Cities in Moline, Illinois. She has specialty interests in measurement and evaluation, clinical interventions and supervision, and peer victimization, and she teaches assessment, ethics, practicum, diagnosis, and professional orientation. She is also the editor-in-chief of Counseling Outcome Research and Evaluation.
- Jonathan H. Ohrt, PhD, is an assistant professor at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, South Carolina. He has specialty interests in group counseling and adolescent well-being, and he teaches a variety of school counseling and helping skills classes.
- Brandie M. Oliver, EdD, is an assistant professor of school counseling at Butler University in Indianapolis, Indiana. Her specific areas of interest include bullying prevention and intervention, grief and loss, data-driven school counseling, restorative practices, and advocating for an increased focus on culturally responsive education. She sees her role as a resource and support for school counselors as well as an advocate and source of positive change for all students, parents, and educators.
- Maria Adele Paredes, PhD, LPCS, CEDS, is a visiting assistant professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She has specialty interests in eating disorders, body image, grief counseling, clinical supervision, and English language learners. She teaches a wide range of core and elective courses, and she enjoys continuing to provide counseling to the community.
- Elizabeth A. Prosek, PhD, NCC, is an assistant professor of counseling at the University of North Texas in Denton, Texas. Her research areas include diagnosis and assessment, co-occurring disorders, and issues in counselor education; her specialty area is interventions for veterans. She teaches clinical mental health counseling curriculum, including diagnosis and treatment planning, professional orientation and ethics, and mental health systems.
- Heather C. Sands, MS, MEd, LMHC, NCC, is a doctoral student of anthropology at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, New Mexico. She has specialty interests in the commodification of race, gender, and sexuality surrounding situations of migration, border politics, and trauma embedded in the modes of neoliberal and late liberal politics of help in the United States. In her scholarship and practice, she hopes to deepen her understanding of mental health as it relates to peoples, places, and politics.

- Marie F. Shoffner, PhD, is an associate professor at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Virginia. She teaches master's-level and doctoral career development courses and is passionate about facilitating doctoral students' development as researchers and scholars. She has specialty interests in career transitions, work and mental health, and girls and women in STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics), and she enjoys volunteering her counseling expertise at Richmond's Fan Free Clinic.
- Cortney Stark is a doctoral student in counselor education at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Her work with individuals struggling with substance abuse includes the utilization of harm reduction strategies and motivational interviewing in individual counseling, medication-assisted treatment of opiate dependence, and coordination and facilitation of Acudetox group treatment sessions. As an educator, she seeks to meet the individual learning needs of each student by being adaptable and by utilizing the self as an instrument in the evolution of students' perceptions, beliefs, and personal meaning.
- Jacqueline M. Swank, PhD, LMHC, LCSW, RPT-S, is an assistant professor at the University of Florida in Gainesville, Florida. She has specialty interests in assessment, outcome research, counselor development/competency, children and adolescents, and creative and nature-based interventions. She teaches counseling courses in the areas of assessment, research, child and adolescent counseling, and play therapy.
- Paula J. Swindle, MA, NCC, LPCS, is a doctoral student at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She plans to become a counselor educator and has specialty interests in religious/spiritual abuse and wellness issues. She has returned to pursue her PhD after 15 years in the counseling field.
- Jodi L. Tangen, PhD, NCC, is an assistant professor of counselor education at North Dakota State University in Fargo, North Dakota. Her dissertation research focused on ways in which counselors facilitate moments of emotional depth with clients. She has a background in educational psychology and has special interests in counseling supervision.
- Michael J. Walsh, PhD, LPC, CRC, CPRP, is an assistant professor of neuropsychiatry and behavioral science for the Rehabilitation Counseling program at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, South Carolina. He has specialty interests in psychiatric rehabilitation.
- Molly Watkins, MEd, NCC, is a professional school and family counselor at Ames Middle School in Ames, Iowa. She has specialty interests in child and adolescent counseling and at-risk factors for youths. She is the former editorial assistant for Counseling Outcome Research and Evaluation.
- Joshua C. Watson, PhD, LPC, NCC, ACS, is an associate professor at Texas A&M University–Corpus Christi. He has specialty interests in counseling student–athletes and the college adjustment experiences of underserved student populations. He is a former president of the Association for Assessment and Counseling and Research, and he serves as the editor for the Journal of College Counseling.
- Kelly L. Wester, PhD, NCC, LPC, is an associate professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She has specialty interests in research training as well as nonsuicidal self-injury. She teaches in research methodology, the research process, counseling theories, and sexual abuse, and she also provides supervision.

